

MR. STANTON'S DISPATCH.

WASHINGTON, May 26—11.30 A. M.—To Major General Dix, New York: Despatches from General Grant received this morning, inform the department that the rebel army still hold a strong position between the North and South Anna rivers, where their forces appear to be concentrated.

It will probably require two or three days to develop operations, which are not proper subjects for publication.

The 9th corps has been incorporated into the Army of the Potomac.

No despatches have been received from any other field of operations.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

THE EVILS OF LYING.—The evils of lying are manifold, and at the present period lies and deception appear to predominate. The press or at least a portion of it, has descended from its high sphere to the low and degrading vice of lying; so much so that the columns of certain journals have become so prostituted that all confidence in their statements is shaken. The evils of lying have been deplored by good men in all generations, but at no time has falsehood taken such a foothold in society as at the present day. So common is untruth in this Nineteenth Century that it has become fashionable. Lies prevail in all the walks of life, so much so, that veracity is almost obsolete. Of all the misfortunes which beset this Nation, it has suffered more from a systematic process of lying, than from any other. —[Wash. Times.

A letter from New York says:—"Some of the butchers up town are closing up their stalls for want of business, they say, all kinds of meats are so high that most of their customers have stopped buying."
